WITH COLORADO DEMOCRATS.

Governor Accused of Deliberately Violating the Law.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 22.—Former Gov. Alva Adams, Jr., was nominated for governor by the state Democratic convention.

Today the rest of the ticket will be nominated. The platform affirms allegiance to the national platform adopted at St. Louis and to the nominees of that convention. The Republican state administration is accused of violating every safeguard guaranteed to the individual by the bill of rights, and the platform says: "We declare the right of every man to earn his living unrestricted and untrammelled."

On the eight hour law the platform says: "The demand for an eight hour law has been incorporated into our constitution. It is therefore beyond discussion and the General Assembly must comply with the public demand."

The governor is accused of deliberately violating the law which forbids either the increase or decrease of an incumbent's compensation.

The sudden drop of the temperature today did not deter Judge Parker from taking his daily plunge in the river. He went for a long horse back ride this afternoon.

The last topic received by far the most attention of any.

CAME AS A SURPRISE.

Bethel People Astonished at Pardon of Martin Carrick.

Bethel, Sept. 21.—Much surprise is expressed locally at the action of Governor McCullough in pardoning Martin Carrick. Carrick was sentenced about a year ago to three and one-half years in the house of correction for a peculiarly aggravating case of wife beating. At that time it was generally felt that the sentence was very lenient. Since that time Carrick has been assiduous in his attempts to get a pardon and has interested many in his behalf who felt perhaps more sympathy for his aged father who lives in Rutland. It is understood that none of the local officers who were cognizant of the circumstances were consulted at all in the matter and the first they knew of the matter were the despatches in the papers on Monday.

NINE KILLED
BY DYNAMITETrolley Horror in Melrose,
Mass., Last Night.

BOX ON EXPRESS WAGON

Fell Into Street and a Heavily Loaded
Car Struck It—Thirty Others
Injured by the Explosion.

Melrose, Mass., Sept. 22.—The wreck of a trolley car colliding with a box containing fifty pounds of dynamite at Melrose last night resulted in the death of nine persons and injury to over thirty. The dead are:

Dr. Malcolm S. McEllan of Melrose Highlands.
E. A. Haynes, wife and three year old daughter of Melrose.Winfield Rowe, motorman, of Saugus.
Joseph Traclos of Malden.
Mrs. Stillman Crough of Stoneham.
E. A. Stowe of South Boston.
Fred Marshall of Boston.

Eighteen of the injured are in the two hospitals here, and several are on the dangerous list. The most seriously hurt are:

Mrs. Mary Edert Conway of Milford, compound fracture of both legs and one foot amputated.
E. A. Waterhouse of Melrose, foot amputated.J. D. Patten of Melrose, both ankles broken and scalp torn off.
G. H. Andrews of Melrose, both legs broken and one amputated.

Dr. Henry C. Herrie of Wakefield, fractured leg and rib.

Mrs. Annie Flaherty of Malden, compound fracture of both legs.
So great was the force of the explosion that all but ten feet of the rear end of the car was blown into small bits, while windows within a radius of a quarter of a mile were shattered.

The immediate vicinity of the accident presented a fearful spectacle. The ground was strewn with legs, arms and portions of the bodies of those who had been killed, while shrieks and groans came from the writhing forms of the injured.

The car contained mostly men on their way to their homes in this city, the accident taking place only a quarter of a mile from Melrose Center. Within a few minutes a great crowd had collected and the injured were tenderly cared for until physicians from Melrose and nearby towns reached the scene.

For more than three hours the greatest confusion existed, and it was difficult to obtain the names of any of the dead or injured, or to ascertain the cause of the accident. Thousands of people rushed about trying to find relatives and friends and the hospitals were besieged.

The police at once began an investigation and arrested Roy Fenton, driver of the express wagon. It was learned that Fenton was on his way to the local express office. He had placed on the tail board of the express wagon two 50-pound boxes of dynamite consigned to the city of Melrose. He did not know until he reached the express office that one of the boxes had dropped off. He hurried back toward Main street in the hope of picking it up, but the electric car reached the box first.

Directly opposite the scene was the Masonic building, every window of which was shattered, and through one of the windows a human form was blown. There were more than a score of people within 100 yards of the car, nearly all of whom were knocked down and injured by the concussion. Glass and splinters were blown in every direction, and few of the passersby escaped some sort of wound.

When they recovered their senses, those who were not dazed, were appalled by the shrieks and groans from the ruins of the shattered car. It seemed as if the entire ground was covered with the writhing forms of the injured and the mangled bodies of the dead. Within a short time a large force of police was on the scene, and every doctor in the city, as well as others in surrounding cities and towns had been notified.

Every sort of vehicle was pressed into service and the work of removing the injured to the hospitals was begun. Within two hours, more than a score had been treated, but of the number three soon succumbed to their injuries.

There was but little left of the wrecked car. The entire front portion was blown to pieces, the middle portion wrecked, but the rear was fairly intact. Conductor Blanchard who was on the rear platform, was not injured at all.

The controller of the car was hurled against the Masonic building, forty feet away, while pieces of the car were picked up at a distance of more than an eighth of a mile.

The force of the explosion practically tore off and hurled in all directions the front portion of the car, and it was here that the deaths occurred. Farther back in the car the sides were blown out and the roof tumbled in, pinning down many of the passengers. On the rear platform the conductor and four or five others escaped without injury.

One of the passengers on the car said that it seemed as if the car was lifted bodily into the air and then coming down with a thundering crash, smashed to pieces.
